A Greaser's Misfortune.

A wild Greaser, with blood in his eye, on the trail of an absconding Digger squaw f om the other side of the mountains, startled our Piutes last Sunday by threatening to murder any Indian under whose protecting wing he should find his runaway mahala. His lost love was a massive chunk of tan-colored flesh, wide and thick like a bell-boy, who went through here a few hours in advauce of the distracted pursuer, escorted by a stalwart brave who The S F.
